Carol Treadwell, Ph.D., is the Finance and Grants Manager at WLI. She has held faculty positions at Middlebury College, Green Mountain College, and the State University of New York (SUNY) where she taught geology, geomorphology, and Environmental Science. She has 15 years' experience in not-for-profit leadership and has served as Executive Director for both the Ausable River Association and Bob Marshall

Wilderness Foundation. Currently a certified grant writer, she employs the power of the pen to gain support for conservation of wild places. She enjoys telling stories about rocks, glaciers, and mountains. Her hobbies are recreating anywhere and anyhow in America's great outdoors. Carol lives in Kalispell, Montana with her husband John, a herd of 25 award winning merino sheep, and a llama named Teddy Roosevelt. Many regions of the world do not have adequate supplies of fresh clean water. Preserving water quality has been one of Carol's career passions. While at the Ausable River Association, she started a citizen science water quality monitoring network, worked to bring watershed citizens together to agree upon best practices to preserve water quality, conducted watershed wide studies on fish passage, wetlands, and stream bank erosion. Throughout her career she has raised millions of dollars to support conservation causes using strengths in grant writing and fund development. Carol hopes to continue the rock-solid grant acquisition foundation Lori Curtis has built for WLI.
